We are glad to notify everyone that, we are finally getting ready to launch the new version of the website very soon. This new version of the site will have PAD File support (which enables software publishers to update more easily). We are now imported existing user database into the new website, working to make transition as transparent as possible. Forum Integration is still pending and we hope that will be done soon and if in any case, if the latter get delayed, to avoid any more delays, we wish to launch the new version of the website to all users and complete the forum integration in a later time.

We apologize for all the previous help seekers on the forum, for no response from our side. We were trying to commit ourselves for better availability and support to all users as much possible after making new version of the site available and after completion of forum integration as well.

NOTE:We were DISABLING the REGISTRATION MODULE to avoid duplication and other complication in the work, thanks for understanding.

We will notify again and will redirect the domain to the new site very soon

Thanks for everyone support and interest in our website
